Layers make many of the manipulations possible within Photoshop and bring great control to the image. But PhotoPaint provides users with a range of features that are also available in other packages. The tagline on the PhotoPaint website is "Accessible, fun and free." The software is also available for Mac users. Adobe promotes PhotoPaint as a great program for users of all ages. PhotoPaint is also free. * Site: www.photo-paint.com *

GIMP is short for GNU Image Manipulation Program. It is an open source — free — image manipulation tool that allows users to manipulate images with layers and transform them using filters. GIMP is an incredibly powerful program, but it's a little difficult to learn. It was the first free open source tool used in television commercials and television shows that used Photoshop as well.

Adobe promotes GIMP as a free alternative to Photoshop in a similar vein to PhotoPaint. *

City Coun. David Chernushenko has asked to head up a planning committee to assess retail density in the city. (File Photo) A councillor is calling for a study of what densification will mean for urban centres in the city in the next 20 years. In a letter to Ward 6 Coun. David Chernushenko on Monday, Ward 3 Coun. Jan Harder said a study of densification is needed to "examine retail options in our community centres and to guide future growth and development." "Based on his [Chernushenko's] experience in Toronto, we have determined that the density of our community centre is limited and that we are not capturing the full benefit of this space," Harder wrote. "It is my understanding that this kind of study in Vancouver was led by city staff. If it is too high a budget and cannot be done with existing resources, it will be essential to our community for this study to take place." A plan to possibly increase density for existing retail space in city centres is in the works at the city level, with staff looking to ramp up densification in the North End, Van Bibber, Waterfront, Coal Harbour, Yaletown and Gastown. The recommendation to add density to these areas was included in a report released earlier this year. But Harder said Chernushenko's assessment of the plan's feasibility is "very narrowly focused on a few locations" in the city. "If Mr. Chernushenko is serious about doing this study, he has my full support," Harder said. "I look forward to his recommendations." "There are many planning and zoning tools available to achieve an objective of increasing the density of development in our city," Chernushenko wrote in an emailed response. "In Vancouver, there is an online planning tool that can be used to explore zoning changes to achieve this objective." He said he is looking at the potential to "rezone certain areas of the city to improve the amount of development." "The issue of density is complex," he wrote. "The value of increasing development is enhanced by close attention to design and the inclusion of supportive infrastructure, such as public art, streetscape improvements and greater density of streets. "There are many factors that need to be considered in any implementation of change including the impact on the community, potential growth to NPA [naturally protected area] values, transport and the environment." Harder said

The tetracycline-resistance determinant of transposon Tn916 in Streptomyces coelicolor A3(2) is localized on a DNA fragment larger than previously described. The L/M/R type tetracycline-resistance determinant from the Tn916 transposon, RTS1, was subcloned from its native location on a 13.2 kb recombinant DNA fragment (J004, HindIII fragment H6.3) into a pUB110 derivative. The resulting chimera (T7RTS1, 26.5 kb) plasmid could be transferred from Streptomyces lividans TK24 into S. coelicolor A3(2). The R gene was shown to code for a protein of M(r) approximately 30,000, three times larger than previously reported.

Q: Are these MSDeploy parameters time-sensitive? In our MSDeploy configuration, the /verbosity parameter that is defaulted to 2 is an integer, but in others I have seen it is an enumeration. Should I treat the string below, or will the usage of the enumeration be in effect from now on regardless of the string used? A: If you're interested in MSDeploy parameters, I would expect that the value of an "enum" parameter should be one of the choices - so yes, the usage of an enumeration is expected. Miguel [Edit] I just found this in the MSDN entry for msdeploy:
