St. Joseph Hosp. v. MH Fin. Corp., 70 F. App'x. 900, 902 (3d Cir. 2003) (internal citation omitted). Thus, because CEDEC received a notice of lis pendens 4 before it filed its Chapter 11 petition, the lis pendens does not affect CEDEC's rights as a creditor. Accordingly, the bankruptcy court properly denied the motion to set aside the lis pendens as moot. 2. The bankruptcy court properly granted the Royal Property Trust's motion to set aside the lis pendens. Because there was a proper lis pendens filed, the bankruptcy court properly set aside the lis pendens pursuant to Rule 60(b)(4). We have held that "[p]arties to a real estate lis pendens may terminate an earlier filed lis pendens pursuant to Rule 60(b)(4) if the lis pendens is void." Mid-Continent Cas. Co. v. GAB Bus. Servs., Inc., 221 F.3d 1346, 1356-57 (11th Cir. 2000) (emphasis added) (citation omitted). A lis pendens is void if the underlying judgment is "'void' for reasons other than lack of jurisdiction," such as if the underlying court "acted in a manner inconsistent with due process of law." The Following User Says Thank lhorie For This Useful Post:Q: Keep my files safe even when my host server goes down I run a PHP website off an Amazon EC2 instance. I have files on S3 for backup. When I created the site on EC2 the files were safely backed up to S3. Now that I've moved the site, is there any way to continue to keep my files safe? A: Having your S3 bucket be the only place that your files go is fine. Even if you need to back it up to an on-premise server. That's the way it should be. The only thing you need to consider is how to put it on another host or another box. This could be as simple as a script to sync the files from the bucket to the other machine, where it can remain even if the original server goes down. S3 is extremely reliable and you're going to have 99.999% uptime. Anything above that is usually caused by human error. Thus, if the S3 server is down, it shouldn't be a problem since you're going to have local copies. If you can increase the redundancy, you could possibly eliminate the need to back up the files from S3. If you're going to be the only host on the box, you could use the console to back things up. Basically, that's your "server going down" scenario. It would be a pretty nasty script to put together, though. Not recommended. If you're going to be hosting somewhere else as well, you can put a switch or router in front of the box so that the files stay safe. That's what I mentioned above. A script that goes to the S3 bucket and copies the files to local storage.
