The objective of the program is to investigate structure function relationships of human hemoglobin and its iso-forms. The program consists of five units: 1) the Morphological Unit, 2) the Structure Function Unit, 3) the Functional Unit, 4) the Transport Unit and 5) the Synthetic Unit. The program project consists of 9 projects and 7 cores. The Program Project is composed of 17 NIH grants including 11 R01s and 6 Contracts. The overall goal of the program is to establish a better understanding of the structure-function relationships of human hemoglobin based on the knowledge gained from the crystallographic studies. Another important goal is to relate structure and function in hemoglobin to genotypic variations. Specifically, we plan to study: 1) How does anemia due to the thermolytic effect of hemoglobin S affect morphology of the red cell? 2) How does deoxygenation affect protein structure? 3) Can pyridoxal phosphate in the active site of hemoglobin A modify the tertiary structure of the beta chain and control oxygen affinity of hemoglobin? 4) Can the sites of CN modification on the alpha chain affect the tertiary structure of the beta chain and the stability of the hemoglobin tetramer? Collagen reactions and blood flow characteristics in the natural reaction of the middle ear in the guinea pig. Tissue samples were taken from the middle ear of adult guinea pigs
